

THE FARMER'S COW OFFERS WINTER FARM TOUR ON PRESIDENT'S DAY

Lebanon, Connecticut January 19, 2010 – Cushman Farms in North Franklin, one of the members of The Farmer's Cow will be opening its doors for a winter farm tour on February 15. The free event runs from 1p until 3p and will allow visitors to see first-hand how The Farmer's Cow milk is produced, visit the cows in their comfy winter home, learn about farming, watch the cows get milked on a "merry-go-round," and experience all that local agriculture is about.

"Our farm tours were extremely popular this past summer and we figured that many of the young children across the area will have President's Day off and would be interested in learning more about farming and where milk comes from," says Robin Chesmer, managing partner with The Farmer's Cow. "Cushman Farms is pleased to open its doors and The Farmer's Cow will also treat visitors to free milk and cookies during the event."

Cushman Farms is located at 393 Lebanon Rd (Route 87) in North Franklin, Connecticut. The farm tour is free and no reservations are required. For more information and directions to the farm visit www.thefarmerscow.com.
